RESPONDENT'S REQUEST FOR STAY PENDING ISSUANCE OF THE MANDATE IN *HAYWARD

Judge: The Honorable
Jeremy Fogel

INTRODUCTION

Petitioner filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus, contending that his due process rights were violated by the Board of Parole Hearings' 2006 decision finding him unsuitable for parole. The Court ordered a response to the Petition. On May 16, 2008, the Ninth Circuit granted en banc review in Hayward v. Marshall, 512 F.3d 536 (9th Cir. 2008), reh'g en banc granted, ___ F.3d ___, 2008 WL 2131400 (9th Cir. filed May 16, 2008), and oral argument is set for June 24, 2008. The en banc court in Hayward may decide whether this Court has jurisdiction over this case, and the appropriate standard to be applied if there is jurisdiction. Therefore, Respondent requests a stay of this case pending the issuance of the mandate in Hayward.

ARGUMENT

I.

THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION AND STAY THIS MATTER PENDING ISSUANCE OF THE MANDATE IN HAYWARD
BECAUSE BOTH THE BALANCE OF THE INTERESTS AND CONSIDERATIONS OF JUDICIAL ORDER AND ECONOMY FAVOR GRANTING A STAY.

A trial court has discretion to ensure the just and efficient determination of a case by staying it pending the resolution of other proceedings where a stay would be "efficient for [the court's] docket and the fairest course for the parties." Leyva v. Certified Grocers of Cal., 593 F.2d 857, 863 (9th Cir. 1979). In determining whether to grant a stay, a court should consider the possible damage that may result, the hardship or inequity that a party may suffer, and the orderly course of justice, in terms of simplifying or complicating the issues, proof, and questions of law, that could result from the issuance of a stay. Lockyer v. Mirant Corp., 398 F.3d 1098, 1109, 1111 (9th Cir. 2005). A court should also take into account the existence of similar cases that are pending in the same district court, and the probability that more are likely to be filed. Id. Staying cases that are on the forefront of an issue provides a necessary delay, allowing for resolution of the issues and resulting in uniform treatment of like suits. Id.

As the resolution of Hayward could significantly impact this case and numerous similar cases and issuing a stay would prevent unfairness and serve the interests of judicial economy, the Court should exercise its discretion and stay this matter pending the issuance of the mandate in

1 Hayward.

2 A. Moving Forward with This Case Before the Finality of
 3 Hayward* Does Not Serve the Interest of Judicial Economy.

4 Granting a stay in this case serves the interests of judicial order and economy. On May 5 16, 2008, the Ninth Circuit granted rehearing en banc in Hayward. (Ex. 1.) At issue before the 6 en banc panel in Hayward are two threshold issues which are necessary to the resolution of this
 7 case: 1) whether California has created a federally protected liberty interest in parole for life
 8 inmates, and 2) if a liberty interest is created, what process is due under clearly established
 9 Supreme Court authority. Resolution of these issues could establish that Petitioner does not have
 10 a federally protected liberty interest in parole, potentially allowing the Court to dismiss his 11 claims for lack of jurisdiction without requiring briefing from the parties. Moreover, it would be 12 wasteful to proceed in this case without the Ninth Circuit's holdings in these matters, as the 13 parties would need to brief issues that will be decided en banc and then submit supplemental 14 briefing to apply the law as clarified in the en banc decision. The two rounds of pleadings may 15 unnecessarily complicate the matters raised and would impair the orderly course of justice.
 16 Waiting for the resolution of Hayward would thus conserve Court resources, and prevent the 17 Court from having to revisit this matter if Hayward is modified or reversed.

18 A stay would also serve judicial order and economy by maintaining uniform treatment of 19 like suits, as once the law is settled it can be uniformly applied. In many habeas petitions
 20 challenging California parole decisions, the Ninth Circuit has sua sponte stayed submission of 21 the cases until the resolution of Hayward. See, e.g., Tolliver v. Carey, no. 07-15347; Boatman v.
 22 Brown, no. 05-16199; Smiley v. Hernandez, no. 06-55727; Valdivia v. Brown, no. 08-15650;
 23 Johnson v. Newland, no. 04-16712; Varner v. Brown, no. 05-16029; Johnson v. Finn, no. 06-
 24 17042; Clark v. Shepherd, no. 06-55065; Cooke v. Solis, no. 06-15444.

25 Granting a stay would therefore conserve judicial resources and serve the Court's interest
 26 in orderly managing these proceedings.

27 B. A Stay Would Not Unfairly Delay Petitioner in Pursuing His Claims.

28 A stay of this case at the district level would not unfairly impose any additional or

1 otherwise avoidable hardship on Petitioner. As discussed above, if the parties proceed in this
 2 case additional briefing will likely be needed after the decision in Hayward, perhaps delaying
 3 final resolution. Also, even if this court decides this case before Hayward, it is likely the losing
 4 party will file an appeal, and that appeal may be delayed pending resolution of Hayward. (See
 5 Arg. I.A.)

6 CONCLUSION

7 When the equities are balanced, the parties' interests and the interests of judicial economy
 8 support staying this case pending the final resolution of Hayward. Staying this case until 9 challenges to Hayward are resolved and that decision becomes final promotes the orderly
 10 resolution of this matter, and will assist in maintaining uniformity of like suits pending before
 11 this Court and similar cases that will be filed in the future. Respondent therefore requests that 12 the Court exercise its discretion to stay this matter pending issuance of the mandate in Hayward.
